

Highlights of February and March

February and March have been transformation months from fully digital education to a graduate return to fully physical education and this has dominated the educational surveillance during both months. There have also been some preparations for the summer and the start of the next semester - it is closer than you think.

U9

At the end of February our Vice President Samuel attended the year's first U9 conference and this time it was held in Jönköping. U9 is a network to connect student unions for business and economics students across Sweden. It aims to share experiences and coordinate educational politics on a national level. The network is under development and this last conference we took big steps forward, increasing the value for economy students all over Sweden!

First stage of the revision of the Ekonomie Kandidat completed

Our largest bachelor's program, the Ekonomie Kandidat, will receive a large makeover over the coming years and the work has now started. A lot of money, time and the direction of the education for future LUSEM students is at stake. The first step entailed mapping how the program stands against other national and international business and economics programs. It was clear from the results that we have big development areas and we students have a huge part here to tell the school what we want in our education. A great chance to exert influence and contribute to concrete change!

Physical education

We are back to campus! Students are starting to once again flock back to LUSEM and it is a joy to the eye! The pandemic is hopefully something of the past and it is time for physical education again. Some of you have never had physical education at the university and it can be hard to know how to study. We are pushing the university to create good guidelines and teach you how to study in this old/new world. At the end of March everything should be back to campus-based education.

Operational dialogues

Every year the faculty leaders and the university leaders have a meeting where they discuss how the university operates to make sure the organization is working as it should. Us students have a large say in this - the union eg. talked a lot about digitalisation (making sure digital tools are supporting the main physical education), lifelong learning (ensuring that students learn to learn and are ready for a changing world) and allocation of funds to students (pushing that all money that is meant for students is used to increase value for the students).
